

WNTC Explains Position

To the Editor:

I would like to thank Mr. McGinty and the rest of your staff for the time and the space in your paper regarding recent delays in WNTC's broadcasting schedule. I feel it's extremely important that everyone realizes that WNTC is still a recognized organization at the State University College at Potsdam, and still seeks SUCP student help in all departments (business, advertising, management, technical, news, as well as programming, music and production). With all the talk of reciprocity and who-is-paying-for-and-benefitting-from-what which goes on in this town constantly, I'm sure many students feel WNTC is no longer an SUCP organization. This, of course, is just not true.

I have only two complaints about the article. The caption to the picture, which reads, "Potsdam State budget cuts and lack of interest have led to delay in WNTC broadcasting" is somewhat ambiguous at best and possibly misleading. The statement suggests that lack of interest among present members has led to the delay in broadcasting. This simply isn't true. The problem, of course, is that we all have to attend school AND work at the station. It's not easy to devote the time to both. Also, I hope everyone realizes from the article that the blame was placed on the SGA by Mr. McGinty and not by me. Naturally, more money means quicker and smoother repairs, but why look back and blame anyone? Too much time is spent worrying about what has happened, and not enough about how things should be done in the future.

One final point, if I may: There is probably enough confusion in people's minds between WNTC and WRPS without running a picture of the WRPS air studio with an article about WNTC. Keep up the good work, and keep in touch.

Respectfully,
Dan Wolfe
Station Manager, WNTC
